About Kimmie Weeks

www.kimmieweeks.com

Kimmie Weeks has worked to alleviate poverty and suffering in Africa and around the world since he experienced the aftermath of the Liberian civil war. At the young age of nine, after nearly being buried alive following disease, hunger and suffering. Weeks pledged to spend his life helping children. Before his fourteenth birthday, Weeks' work had helped to disarm 20,000 child soldiers, for which the Liberian government attempted to assassinate him. As a result, Weeks was forced to flee to the United States.

Now a graduate of Amherst College, Weeks leads Youth Action International, a nonprofit dedicated to rebuild communities through schools, playgrounds, and business opportunities for women and children in war-torn African countries. He also travels the world speaking in favor of world youth activism and African relief. Weeks has been featured in The New York Times, the BBC, TIME For Kids, The Washington Post, and many other media. He was also profiled along with the likes of Gandhi and Martin Luther King, Jr. as an international peacemaker in the book Peace in Our Lifetime.

The StarSpirit International, Inc.'s Founder and Chief Creative Officer is Nana Akomfohene Korantema Ayebofo. Nana had a vision and started StarSpirit International, Inc. as a multicultural arts, global health and economic development initiative that promotes education about African culture and encourages international exchanges between African Americans and Africans in Africa, as well as with Africans across the Diaspora and other members of the American and international community. A main objective is to heal damage to identity from enslavement, colonialization, and oppression. Consistent with this aim, StarSpirit International's motto and call to others is to: "Be Your Higher Self."
